

A Method and System for Using Porous Structures in Solid Freeform Fabrication

ABSTRACT

A method for producing porous structures in a three-dimensional object with solid freeform fabrication includes selectively depositing a removable support material, depositing a build material defining the three-dimensional object, and removing the selectively deposited removable support material to form a number of pores within the three-dimensional object.